A walking simulator about the most important journey of a student's life

GAME CONCEPT

A comedy walking simulator set during a student's chaotic morning commute to NTU for building blocs.

Navigate a simple yet absurd journey filled with unexpected encounters, all while a relentless (and sometimes 3rd-wall breaking) narrator nags inside your head.

The becomes a fresh comedy of

1. questionable decisions
2. chaotic detours
3. bizarre situations

Can you survive the commute and make it on time, or will the madness get the better of you?

TARGET AUDIENCE

We designed it for people looking for:

- a light, funny experience with low-pressure gameplay
- quirky narratives, offbeat humour
- games that don't take themselves too seriously.
- Slice of life adventures who know the chaos of running late

AIM OF THE GAME

Make your way to NTU and arrive at BuildingBlocs before time runs out. Along the journey, navigate unexpected obstacles, avoid time wasting distractions, and survive a series of absurd encounters that threaten to delay your morning commute.

The destination is simple: get to school before it's too late. The journey, however, is anything but simple.

Narrator system

Why is this fun?

What begins as a simple trip to NTU quickly unravels into a chain of ridiculous events and increasingly absurd situations.

The fun comes from never knowing what will happen next. Combined with the constant commentary of a therapeutic-sounding narrator, even the most ordinary commute becomes an unpredictable and entertaining adventure.

Secret Ending

How does this show the magic in our everyday life?

Many of these ridiculous events actually symbolise the simple hidden things in life that we take for granted. Our daily lives can feel as extraordinary as these bizarre events once we notice their similarities.

The connection between the absurdity of this game and the mundane of our lives is subtly pointed out by the narrator. This allows people to see the mundane in a new light.
